Correction: Virtual ASEAN Conference 2025 Feedback

- NIM sensitivity of 1.2bps for every 25bps rate movement. The lower NIM sensitivity was due to the dynamic nature of balance sheet. UOB will focus more on managing net interest income than NIM. UOB is seeing ample liquidity in the system, thus there is still room to manage liabilities. Long term deposit strategy is focusing on CASA growth. Credit quality is one of the key factors of expanding loan book, and they are not in a rush to chase loans.
- Wealth management is a key contributor to non-NII. 40% AUM is in invested assets and UOB aims to bring this ratio up. Current focus of wealth clients are still in less risky assets, such as money market and fixed income assets. Recent pickup in market activities should be able to support non-NII performance. ~60% AUM is from non-Singapore clients, and UOB will focus on growing AUM from North Asian clients.
- Costs outlook: apart from revenue, cost is another driver of RoE. In the medium term, UOB expects a shift from personnel cost to technology cost, with digital banking TMRW launched / planning to launch in all the covering markets.
- The pause of 2025 guidance was driven by higher possibility of tail risk. With trade tension easing and clearer picture of economic outlook, UOB should be able to communicate more during 2Q results.
- Overall strategy: focus on growing trade and cash management platform, to lower RWA and funding costs. The shift into less capital intensive business should be able to allow UOB to better manage capital in the future.

We have made corrections to the text: 1) about the company's focus on North Asian clients, which is to increase AUM, not decrease; and 2) removing mention of a high LDR.
